

Published: 07.16.2009

Thorns & Flowers

ARIZONA DAILY STAR

Flowers to Robert Glennon, a University of Arizona law professor, for being a good sport and for casting Arizona in a good light. Glennon will be a guest appearing tonight on "The Daily Show."

Glennon is scheduled to be interviewed in New York by show host Jon Stewart on a segment that is to air at 11 p.m. on Comedy Central. It is rebroadcast at 8 p.m. Friday.

Glennon authored a new book, "Unquenchable: America's Water Crisis and What We Can Do About It." He intends to talk about the book and the the nation's overuse of water.

Stewart, known for stares, smirks and sarcasm, may have other plans.

The UA press office said Glennon is trying to reach a wider audience and to put the issue "on the nation's radar screen."

"The Daily Show" certainly attracts a wide audience, including policy wonks who would usually read such a book.

According to UA press materials, Glennon doesn't know what to expect from Stewart, whose sarcasm can be cutting. The Star's Tom Beal helped to prep Glennon Tuesday with some fairly outlandish questions, but Glennon said it is pretty much impossible to prepare for such a stint. He said he'll take whatever happens in stride. Read Beal's story at tiny.azstarnet.com/1182 online.

To Stewart: Don't make us give you a thorn for treating Glennon poorly.