Sample Projects, Publications - Service Impact Area

Reform of civil legal service unauthorized practice of law (UPL) regulation presents a tipping point in the U.S. legal market, and there is limited opportunity to embed access-to-justice goals and models to ensure that underrepresented populations are served by these reforms. Innovation for Justice (i4J) is at the forefront of this work and is uniquely positioned as a design hub that brings the potentially divergent goals of regulatory reform decision-makers, legal service providers, and underrepresented populations together in advancing access to justice. i4J's work is part of a growing movement across the US to empower community-led legal service models. In 2019, i4J was the first program in the nation to secure a UPL waiver from a state Supreme Court to permit community-based organizations' non-lawyer staff to include legal services in their client service model. The policy change and resulting service model has since been replicated in five states, and the DVLA project was cited in the Biden Administration's Strategic Plan for Ending Gender-Based Violence.

Housing Stability Legal Advocate Initiative (<https://www.innovation4justice.org/hsla>)

This pilot is delivering scalable solutions in Arizona and Utah regarding the potential of new types of legal service providers and new technologies to legally empower people experiencing housing instability.

Embedding Regulatory Reform-Based Civil Justice Problem-Solving in Patient Care

(https://docs.google.com/document/d/1H56m_msHnwXxAhcVS-3Op9UCt_e9oxsx/)

Sample Projects and Publications - System Impact Area

i4J's System Impact Area educates and empowers the legal sector to create tech solutions that improve the administration of justice and bridge the justice gap. i4J's mission is to harness the collective power of technology, design, education, and innovation to drive the creation of human-centered justice technologies that advance access to justice. i4J was the first lab in the nation to evaluate the usability and accessibility of online dispute resolution and has produced a body of work at the intersection of UX methods and access to justice that is informing national best practices in the design and implementation of legal technologies.

UX discovery project: Nevada's new online portal for e-filing domestic violence protection orders

<https://www.innovation4justice.org/nv-dv-portal>

i4J partnered with the Nevada Supreme Court's Administrative Office of the Courts on a user experience (UX) discovery project to advance the development of Nevada's new statewide Domestic Violence Protection Order (DVPO) Portal. The project led to a three-year partnership with the National Center for State Courts (2024-2027) to standardize best practices in online protective order design and implementation.

Utah Online Dispute Resolution Platform: A Usability Evaluation and Report

<https://www.innovation4justice.org/work/utah-ux>

Created with the support of Pew Charitable Trusts. The first research study in the U.S. to evaluate the usability of online dispute resolution for court users.

Partnership with Michigan Office of Child Support

(<https://www.innovation4justice.org/mi-childsupport>)

Partnership to better understand the needs, motivations, challenges, and pain points that parents in the child support system face, and to craft human-centered solutions that address family needs and inform the potential adoption of statewide technologies.

Benefactor UX Evaluation and Roadmap Final Report

(https://docs.google.com/presentation/d/1Zsla7fXDzhZB5dXfOqLb8AP4isUgAH-EfHXHjVR_cDk/)

Partnership with Alaska Legal Services Corporation (ALSC) to conduct a user experience (UX) evaluation and discovery on an emerging legal technology related to Social Security Disability (SSD) benefits, aimed at improving the current UX of Benefactor, and to build a human-centered roadmap for future product development and legal empowerment.

Sample Projects and Publications - Structure Impact Area

For policy advocates, particularly advocates in under-resourced communities, locating the laws of their state and of other states can be challenging and time consuming. In addition, policy change requires robust data collection and aggregation, within and across jurisdictions. Policy advocates have limited resources to locate and source data that supports the needs for policy change. Innovation for Justice (i4J) is uniquely positioned as a design hub with the capacity to aggregate large sets of law and data to build helpful tools to assist policy advocates in their mission to address social justice problems. For the past 4 years, Innovation for Justice (i4J) has been a leading resource for developing tools to arm policy advocates to champion change in their jurisdiction. In addition to tools that have delivered meaningful medical debt and eviction policy change in 14 states, the research produced by the Structure Impact area was cited in the CDC Eviction Moratorium during the COVID-19 pandemic.

The Unauthorized Practice of Law Policy Toolkit (Domestic Violence Case Study:

<https://www.innovation4justice.org/research/structure/upltoolkit>)

A jurisdiction-agnostic deliverable that aggregates research findings to support data-informed exploration of UPL reform in the context of the unmet legal needs of DV survivors. The project includes a first-of-its kind 50 state database of UPL regulations and exceptions.

Medical Debt Policy Scorecard (<https://medicaldebtpolycyscorecard.org>)

Created with the support of Pew Charitable Trusts and the Utah Bar Foundation. Scored and ranked the 50 states across four policy goals. The Scorecard offers an open-source dataset, interactive map, and detailed report to researchers, policy advocates, and state legislators. The Scorecard contributed to medical debt policy reform in 7 states.

Cost of Eviction Calculator (<https://uarizona.neotalogic.com/a/costofevictioncalculator>)

A jurisdiction-agnostic online tool that aggregates the downstream costs of eviction across social systems and empower advocates to leverage data to improve eviction-prevention policies and services in their communities. The Cost of Eviction Calculator contributed to eviction policy reform in 8 states.

Sample Projects and Publications - Early Work of i4J

HelloLandlord.org

Created in partnership with LawX Legal Design Lab at BYU Law and Wilson Sonsini's tech subsidiary, 650, HelloLandlord.org is a jurisdiction-agonistic, bilingual customized software tool that empowers tenants to write letters to their landlords when they will miss a rent payment or need a repair to their rental, by automating the letter writing process and providing eviction prevention resources.

The RENT Project (tucsonrentproject.org)

Thanks to the generous support of the Agnese Nelms Haury Program in Environment and Social Justice, i4J and Step Up to Justice launched the RENT Project in 2019, to offer tenant education workshops in Pima County and improve understanding of how early preventative tenant education can reduce evictions.
